ANOTHER TACTICAL DRILL OF RUSSIAN MARINES

Posted on February 6, 2016 by team

Marines of the Pacific Fleet had a tactical landing operation drill at the Klerk ground field in the South Primorye (Far East of Russia). Over a thousand soldiers participated. They used over 80 units of military and special equipment, about ten combat and service ships, aircraft and helicopters (Su-24, Mi-28)...

The tasks of the drill were breaking through the enemy anti-airborne defence, simultaneous striking of forces on the sea, in the air and on the shore, also creating coastal bridge-heads.

Gunners participated in the drill as well.

Those two photos, on number 3 are the same, only one has zoomed in, if you think we are stupid enough to fall for that you are mistaken, what used to be a brilliant site has gone down hill.

Obsolete tactics. This is WWII stuff. Try this against an enemy with any serious defensive capability, anti-ship missiles and see what happens with all those landing ships, vehicles and personnel bunched up on the beach.

..."Try this against an enemy with any serious defensive capability, anti-ship missiles and". The Americans have the same problem. They haven't faced an enemy like that. Ever.

Russia does not assault countries with serious defensive capabilities. These so called "tactical drills" are to intimidate its weak neighbors like Georgia or Ukraine.

..."Russia does not assault countries with serious...". No, it doesn't. Russia doesn't invade and kill some 130,000+ Civilians while looking for "Weapons of Mass Destruction" that don't exist, leaving the area in total chaos, and exporting violence and people. I suppose you have no shame.

Anti-ship missile easier to use against US aircraft carriers.

The purpose of these tactical drills is to show to Ukrainians and Georgians that Russia is capable of capturing and destroying Odessa and Batumi.

..."to show to Ukrainians and Georgians that Russia is capable of capturing and destroying". They know that pretty well. They even fought together and beat the Nazis to oblivion.
So, Don't worry, Ed. You should be scared only if you are HeadChopping Terrorist... Are you?

Why so scared, Ed? Are you in ISIS?

Ed, this drills seem to scare you deep in your pants. And also unrelated pics like airliner factories. LOL! Take a deep breath... Are you in Al-Nusra?

Incorrect Sole Survivor - the 1944 Okinawa landings exposed U.S. Navy ships to "manned anti-ship missiles", namely kamikaze suicide plane attacks. Casualties were very heavy. That is why amphibious landings today have to be conducted from far offshore, mostly using high speed rotorcraft and air cushion vehicles.

..."namely kamikaze suicide plane..." LOL. Those are only slow insects against today's antiship missiles, the same ones you were writing about.
..."mostly using high speed rotorcraft and air cushion...". Which are vulnerable by the same modern missiles and other defenses.
As said, the Americans have the same problem as the Russians. They haven't faced an enemy "with any serious defensive capability, anti-ship missiles". Probably that's why both do the same kind of landing exercises.
