Starring Gael Garcia Bernal, Lola Kirke and Bernadette Peters, Mozart In The Jungle will continue the story of the talented, contentious musicians who perform (and live) with passion under the baton of its spirited single-name conductor Rodrigo (Bernal). Executive produced by Roman Coppola, Jason Schwartzman, Alex Timbers and Paul Weitz, Season 3 will see Rodrigo and many musicians take their talents to Europe.

Based on Blair Tindall's critically acclaimed memoir Mozart In The Jungle: Sex, Drugs & Classical Music, the series draws back the curtain at the New York Symphony, where artistic dedication and creativity collide with mind games, politicking and survival instincts. The series also stars Saffron Burrows, Malcolm McDowell, Hannah Dunne and Schwartzman.

Agree, and it's unlike anything else on TV.

It's been good at times, mostly in the John Hodgeman arc, but it's just as often corny or preposterous (the crazy violinist ex-wife, the one-nighter between the hot cellist and the older guy, the irritating love-triangle with the clarinetist's creepy dancer boyfriend). These Amazon shows have a pretty low bar.
