i fucking love "astronaut struggles to remember gravity" stories

"If you have to pee in space in the middle of the night," he explains, "you just kind of push off and float over and do your business and then fall back. So, [back home,] I wake up and I'm laying on my back and trying to push off, trying to float over, and that's not working. Then I roll over on the ground floor, and I'm like 'I don't get it.' And I have to crawl to the bathroom before I figure it out."

OMG THE DOGS WERE NOT SUPPOSED TO BE THERE IN THAT PHOTO AND THE PERFECT COMPOSITION WAS THE HAPPIEST ACCIDENT

He video-chatted with family and operated the cranelike robotic arm during spacewalk operations and kept up with exercises designed to counter the physical effects of being in space. He missed his pups Jake and Scout, whom he would later sneak onto NASA grounds for the 2009 astronaut photo that continues to make the feel-good rounds on the internet to this day. (His favorite part about the photo, which besides being so freaking cute also has the pyramidal composition of a Renaissance painting, is that the three of them appear to all be holding hands.) And he took photos of his own during his downtime, of Earth's continents and the vast expanses of water that surround them.
