I'm never too sure when it comes to talking about my work where making is replaced by teaching—every time
I make I end up thinking about whether what I take for granted in my everyday work has additional value to those relying on keyboard dexterity synchronised with head knowledge. My world of designing, making and [] READ MORE
REPAIRING A SAW HANDLE HORN 18 November 2017 / Paul Sellers / Paul Sellers' Blog / Somments
The saw handle on my R Groves rip had been damaged and poorly repaired. It happens and it's not uncommon at all to find a saw horn damaged. The repair popped off at some time and I have put off the repair proper until I found the right time; that's something I rarely do because [] READ MORE
WE KEEP PRESSING ON! ② 17 November 2017 / ♣ Paul Sellers / ▶ Paul Sellers' Blog / ▶ 5 Comments
When your life's work becomes a reflection in the lives of others – when you see others learning your craft from you and you can watch from a distance as they grow – there is something unique taking place that defies the status quo. Leaving North Wales two years ago seemed yet another big step [] READ MORE THONET—BRILLIANCE IN DESIGN: PART II
① 13 November 2017 / ♣ Paul Sellers / ▶ Paul Sellers' Blog / ▶ 10 Comments
Thonet Chair Designs—What They Brought to the Table Michael Thonet chairs have on the one hand remained unchanged for almost two centuries and then enjoyed variations on the theme for decorative accentuation and individualising a design under Thonet's concept. Working at my workbench I slipped into his entrepreneurial designer shoes as I embraced his commitment []
THONET—BRILLIANCE IN DESIGN: PART I
② 12 November 2017 / ♣ Paul Sellers / ▶ Paul Sellers' Blog / ▶ 4 Comments
Yup! My parents owned a set of six Thonet dining chairs and it was indeed Thonet who designed a chair that brought a truly democratised and radical product in chair form to our world of wooden seating. Dining chairs, office chairs and even rocking chairs of many a hundred thousand gradually came into full mass-production []
A NEW PROJECT SERIES-A BEDSIDE CABINET 1 November 2017 / ♣ Paul Sellers / ▶ Paul Sellers' Blog / ▶ No Comments I am sure you will enjoy following this series and making the cabinet too but even if you don't make the actual cabinet there is much to learn from the series because it is the first time we have used my system of Mortise and Tenon joinery on a full project. To say that it [] READ MORE
GUIDES TO EQUIP NEW WOODWORKERS
In order to best help new and beginner woodworkers to get the right foundation they need to progress their craft, we are providing a core series of beginner guides to bring clear focus on the basics of woodworking. We will explain more about the tools we consider essential to getting started, how we use them []
READ MORE LEFT VERSUS RIGHT
② 7 November 2017 / ♣ Paul Sellers / ▶ Paul Sellers' Blog / ▶ 30 Comments
In last week's class I asked how many of the 11 students were left handed and five left hands went up. Hannah was there too so she made it an equal six and six and my being right and periodically left handed made for a perfect if not unusual balance. That being so, it made []
NO CELL PHONES! ② 5 November 2017 / ♣ Paul Sellers / ▶ Paul Sellers' Blog / ▶ 16 Comments
This past Friday it seemed, immersed in a unique silence of sorts that slowly descended on the workshop, men and women gathered around my workbench. My tools were sharp and ready to task and I watched the gathering shuffle onto their stools to find comfortable positions. To describe this sense of remarkable quiet would be []
