Fun fact: The Queen is literally above the law in the UK, Trump should be careful how he treats her.

Why do I have this feeling that he boorishly cut in front of her and stood on a ground photo mark that was clearly meant for her?

He's always gotta be front and center even if that means walking in front of the Queen of England in her own country.

Why does she carry that purse everywhere? What can it hold that a servant couldn't hold for her? It's a direct line to Torchwood isn't it?

God, he's such a boorish twat. The only good thing about the visit was the Trump Baby blimp.

I thought no one was supposed to stand in front of the queen. Isn't that a rule?
