Recently we have seen the announcement of multiple Marvel television shows that will be developing under the new Disney+ banner. ‘Loki’ is currently the only Disney+ Marvel Studios TV Series that has been officially confirmed by Bob Iger however other shows such as ‘Vision and The Scarlet Witch’, ‘Rocket And Groot’, ‘Falcon And The Winter Solider’ and ‘Nick Fury’ have been reported as in development with ‘Vision and The Scarlet Witch’ to be helmed by Jac Schaeffer (which we have heard may begin production next year alongside the ‘Loki’ series) and Malcolm Spellman developing the ‘Falcon And The Winter Solider’ Series.

However, it seems Marvel Studios is not done just yet with having limited series’ in store for the Disney+ Streaming Service with a ‘Lady Sif’ TV Series set to be in early development. Kevin Feige will produce the show with Jaimie Alexander expected to reprise her role. It is currently unclear whether the show will take place before or after ‘Thor: Ragnarok’.

In regards to the shows’ budget, all of the Disney+ Marvel Studios shows will receive a $100M budget for their 6-8 episode limited series’, this is a similar amount for Jon Favreau’s ‘The Mandalorian’ which will also debut in fall 2019 on Disney+.

Let us know your thoughts on this potential limited series and the content coming to Disney+ as a whole.

Jaimie Alexander’s representatives had no comment.
