Pendant que vous bossez et que Twitter est calme, voilà un #UnLapinUnThread qui devrait, si j'arrive à synthétiser mes idées, vous faire revoir totalement la notion de cerveau. Rien que ça.

Et on va même utiliser des mots compliqués, mais avant ça, on va parler d'Imhotep.

Et pour cela il faut comprendre d'où l'on vient.

Alors on va faire un peu d'histoire.

Il est mince, il fait beau (oui parce qu'on ne sait pas si le héros en lui-même l'était), il sent bon le sable chaud... Et notre héros est une sorte de légionnaire.

Nous sommes quelque part au XXVII (27e) siècle avant notre ère en Égypte.

On va l'appeler Bob.

Qffwffq @qffwffq · 3h

Pour une raison inconnue 48 siècles et quelques semaines plus tard, Bob a été blessé à la tête. Salement blessé même parce que son crâne bouge et qu'on peut sentir un truc mou en dessous.

On va pas se le cacher, Bob va mourir. Mais pas tout de suite.

Qffwffq @qffwffq · 3h

Avant de mourir, Bob va être vu par un architecte, médecin, sculpteur sur bois et fan de curling, bref par un savant universel de l'époque : Imhotep.

Je vous laisse découvrir sa vie sur wikipédia parce que même si elle est fascinante, ce n'est pas le sujet du jour.

Imhotep examine Bob, qui râle parce qu'il a mal. Il délire même.

Et là Imhotep fait une très étrange découverte.
