Review

Creates fake mouse movements to emulate activity and disable screensaver.
A review by Felix Cheng

Mouse Jiggler is a small and sometimes helpful tool which will simulate mouse movement.

The program itself really has no other functions other than faking mouse movement. This functionality can be useful in certain situations, not least of which is to disable annoying screensavers which can then prevent one from having to unlock their system.

Mouse Jiggler remains silently in the system tray and can be easily activated and subsequently deactivated at any time with just a couple of clicks.

Use of this program also does not get in the way of when you're actually using the PC.

Overall, Mouse Jiggler can be helpful in some situations and is somewhat unique in that there are very little non-ad-supported or completely free apps out there like it.

Arkane Systems

A utility to continuously jiggle the mouse pointer to prevent screen saver activation. Tick the 'Enable jiggle?' checkbox to begin jiggling the mouse; untick it to stop. The 'Zen jiggle?' checkbox enables a mode in which the pointer is jiggled 'virtually' - the system believes it to be moving and thus screen saver activation, etc., is prevented, but the pointer does not actually move.
