The mandatory fingerprints are an implementation of an eu-regulation, so the federal government can't change that.

This removal of sex on our id's could also mean that our ID's are no longer valid in other countries and that we will have to bring our passports. (Since those have to conform to standards set by treaties, laws of third countries etc) I'm not against it but this will probably be a legal minefield ...

Why did you change the title to "to disappear", rather than keep the original "could disappear"?

Less fun for people who get easily mistaken for the other gender due to certain features..

Help, I'm being repressed!

For me and for non-binary friends it would mean freedom.

Also, to change your gender marker on the ID you need to state that you want this twice, with a three month cool off

I'm very happy about this (as a first step), less so about the needless fuss some people will make about it.

... Gender never was listed on the ID cards to begin with, at least not on mine which lists Sex (totally different concepts), so I am kind of lost w.r.t. this change (I mean if the card listed Sex and Gender, then removing Gender makes sense).

EDIT: to the people down voting; Sex and Gender are both clearly defined concepts, as per the WHO and also in the way that I used the concepts in my own research (glycomics based research). You can be whatever Gender you want to be but your Sex is ~~fixed and unchangeable~~ significantly harder to change (requiring hormone treatment or similar, which would than only impact some aspects, while other aspects are immutable).

Alright, that's just false so I have to correct it in case some people read this and take it at face value.

The idea that sex (not gender) is a binary, immutable, category is not aligned with our current understanding of Geslacht translates into sex, gender, ...

So yeah, gender is mentioned on the ID card.

Good. It was always fucking weird that your ID card says what you have in your pants. Like, I'm not going to let you check it so why do you have to know?

Now that we're allowing people to change their official gender without changing their sex organs, it has become even more weird. If we're going to have people's gender identity on there, why not sexual preference, personality type, or IQ?

Meanwhile, despite being utterly useless, it caused real
