I have genuinely spent 10 minutes starting at this but, no, it really DOES appear to be true that a bunch of cryptobros just spent €2.6 MILLION - 100x the asking price - for a book at auction in the mistaken belief that they would therefore own the copyright in it.

Spice DAO (🌱, 🌱) @TheSpiceDAO · Jan 15

We won the auction for €2.66M. Now our mission is to:

1. Make the book public (to the extent permitted by law)
2. Produce an original animated limited series inspired by the book and sell it to a streaming service
3. Support derivative projects from the community

Do we really want to be perceived as book burners?

oh I don't care too much what a bunch of normies that probably didn't even know the book existed think. The book would still exist but digitized and in the blockchain.

They already blew the money they got on the auction, where are they going to get the $100/jpg it'll take to mint each page as an NFT?

Here's the gift: he bought it with personal cash. Then his DAO crowdfunded $12 million to buy it from him, so ownership would transfer to the DAO. The item is irrelevant to the gift of fleecing rubes.

..., but if I understood that correctly, it is not even the last copy of it, just one of very few. What good does it do for their "scarcity" to burn one of five or so?

I know it's far from the most important thing here, but the abbreviation of "with" is "w/" with a slash, not a backslash. They don't seem highly literate.
