If this is the first you're hearing about this, the number was upped to way over 1000 unmarked graves at many different sites.

This is in British Columbia. Previously they found unmarked graves in Saskatchewan, Kamloops, and Cranbrook BC. All indigenous kids who died of diseases or other causes.

They will find similar graves all across the USA

US would be a valid guess, too. I don't think people realize how many residential schools the US had and what went on there

Just add it to the list, tbh.

A lot of stuff like this happened in North America, even outside of these Catholic Church schools. For example, go look up the Dozier School for Boys which didn't shut down until 2011.

There was hundreds of men that came forward years later to tell horrible stories. In this school they had a white building that the kids nicknamed the White House. For punishment the kids would be taken into there and a large industrial fan would be turned on to drown out the screams. The children would be tied to a bed and whipped, bad enough that some died from the beatings. There was at least 100 deaths. The issue with that number is that the people who lived through it know many more that died but no remains was found. This POS was named by many of the men for being the leader in these beatings, may he burn in hell.

Jesus christ, beating children to death?

This is in many ways, worse than Guantanamo

We should leave memorial messages on that wall perhaps.

Honor the dead, no not that Troy asshole. No reason to let it be forgotten.

Troy E. Tidwell, a former disciplinarian at the Dozier School for Boys who was accused of abuse by hundreds of men, died April 5. He was 97. "

Maybe something along those lines?

Many of the schools the indigenous children were sent to had graves on site. We would also force them to speak English and cut off their hair (their long hair is part of their culture). They also didn't get food and would have to get their own. Very cruel history of education in America these sins and work so they stop happening. I scorn at them, how can they think they will get to heaven when they won't even stop kids from being raped by priests? If there is a god, he will not forgive you when judgement day comes. In fact, you will be thrown to the deepest most depraved depths of hell like you fucking deserve

Sorry for the rant... it seems as if headline after headline of crimes against humanity committed by missionaries and clergy come up so fucking often. When will it end?!

Child pregnancies were widespread and covered up," Sellars said. "In survivors' accounts that are disturbing beyond words, we've heard accounts that unwanted babies of priests were burned in the incinerator.

What the fuck?!
