

News > World > Americas

Website that promised to unmask Charlie Kirk critics took thousands after he died - then disappeared, report says

The site 'Expose Charlie's Murderers' was launched hours after Kirk's assassination on September 10 and pledged to name and shame those who spoke out against him

Rhian Lubin in New York • Thursday 23 October 2025 21:27 BST • Comments

Your privacy options

The Independent and our 103 partners use cookies and other similar technologies to enable a variety of functions and features on our website. Some are essential for the website to work properly whilst others allow us to improve our services to you, which can include personalised content and advertising with your consent. We and our partners may access personal data using these cookies and similar technologies, such as articles visited or your IP address.

You can change your preferences at any time by clicking on 'Privacy settings' at the bottom of any page. Your consent only applies to this website. We use cookies or similar technologies for the following purposes:

Precise geolocation data, and identification through device scanning

Store and/or access information on a device

Personalised advertising and content, advertising and content measurement, audience research and services development

Analytics storage

To accept or reject cookies, or to opt out where our partners rely on a legitimate interest to use your information, click or tap the buttons below:

OPTIONSAGREE