Katy Perry and Justin Trudeau have launched their relationship on Instagram, after the singer posted a photo of the pair smiling cheek to cheek and a video of them eating sushi together while in Japan.

Perry’s post appeared to confirm the pair are in a relationship, after months of speculation about a possible romance between her and the former Canadian prime minister.

The selfie was part of a carousel of photos and videos of a trip to Japan, posted on Saturday to the singer’s account, which has 202 million followers.

Perry captioned the series “tokyo times on tour and more”, followed by a smiling face and several emojis, including flowers and a red heart.

The post comes after Trudeau reshared a photo on X on Thursday of the pair posing with Japan’s former prime minister, Fumio Kishida, and his wife, Yuko.

When resharing the post, Trudeau wrote: “Great to see you @kishida230. Katy and I were so glad to have the
