This Does Not Compute
@thisdoesnotcomp@bitbang.social

My present to you, this week's episode available a day early! Come see how I bought an enterprise-class firewall for a bargain price and got exactly what I paid for...

@thisdoesnotcomp U37 is probably a DC-DC step-down controller since there is a large coil around. It likely gives 5V from the input.
I'd say it failed short to ground, and took down the double diode with it first time.

Maybe a photo of a working board would help find the reference.

Did someone tried to send passive PoE into the RJ and it's not protected? On a $1500 gear? Or was it lightning?
