Office is the last good branding Microsoft have and they're just getting rid of it, I can't believe it

THE_GR8_MIKE@lemmy.world

Right after I learn about how much of a failure Copilot has been, and they do this. I'm not surprised, but man.

SoftestSapphic@lemmy.world

Damn, guess Libre Office is the only office app now

Scrollone@feddit.it

lol OnlyOffice is also an office app, so LibreOffice is not the only office.

C Suite is in a cult.

Dogiedog64@lemmy.world

Peak Business Idiot behavior. They're too fucking stupid and caught up in the hype to notice that everything is on fire and their businesses are failing. The Line may be going up, but the companies are going DOWN.

suicidaleggroll@lemmy.world

It's happening at a lot of companies. Last year our C-suite cancelled some big IR&D projects (where we were designing real products that could actually be built and sold) in order to dump $300k/mo into renting a cloud AI infrastructure that none of the employees want or use.

How do we pivot this to the death of the MBA. Because i'd quite like that.

peopleproblems@lemmy.world

English

↑ 1 · 6 minutes ago

That will be much harder. The MBA is specifically designed and controlled by the biggest financial institutions to implement management in a way that always benefits them.

They will never allow the MBA to die.

This is the most idiotic rename ever. Are they high in Microslop?

rumba@lemmy.zip

Microsoft: We can't find anyone who likes Copilot.

Also Microsoft: Let's rebrand our only well-received products as Copilot.

Wispy2891@lemmy.world

Preview of tickets incoming in the next days:

"Do I have Copilot included?" "Is it the same as Copilot in Word?" "Do I need an extra license?" "Where is the Office app?" "Can you install Microsoft Office for me?"

andz@lemmy.world

English

↑ 1 · 23 minutes ago

Ironically a lot of those questions will probably be asked to Copilot itself first and hilarity will inevitably ensue.

It's probably after that the tickets will rain down en masse and they deserve nothing less :D

For those required to use Ai in their job would this count then?

_edge@discuss.tchncs.de

This may be the strategy. 90% of all business users use copilot daily (after we renamed their coffeemachine and the kitchen sink to copilot)

You can call it trash can, garbage bin, wheely bin,dumpster, it's all the same, putting lipstick on a pig, it will still be a pig

I actually prefer the ribbon layout. But I actually only really started using Word when this was the interface

In order to see the "View - User Interface", I had to go to View -> View -> select Menubar

Side note: for capturing screenshots I can recommend Spectacle, works at least as good as snipping tool in Windows and with the same shortcut as snipping tool.

They really have a massive talent. It's not easy to have such a consistent record in choosing stupid and confusing names, rebranding stuff with no reason.

Fit_Series_573@lemmy.world

↑ 33 · 4 hours ago

This feels like it'll go the HBO Max, wait Max, no HBO Max, dibocal route

coolmojo@lemmy.world

English

↑ 4 · 2 hours ago

It will be probably just Netflix now, since they bought it.

Fit_Series_573@lemmy.world

sigh NetMax? /s

Tilgare@lemmy.world

English

↑ 7 · 3 hours ago

There was also HBO Now and HBO Go, so there's even more runway for Microsoft to spend years floundering on their naming before they catch up.

Buelldozer@lemmy.today

English

↑ 20 ↓ 1 · 4 hours ago

IIRC this happened in January of 2025. The rebrand obviously failed because I don't know a single person who calls it anything other than "Office" or "Microsoft Office".

chaogomu@lemmy.world

English

↑ 12 · 4 hours ago

I'm calling all of it microslop. So there's that.

87Six@lemmy.zip

You're a hero, man / woman (idk what kinda gender chaogomu is supposed to suggest - eldrich entity?)

DisgruntledPelican@lemmy.world

In reality the copilot is not their ai, it is the user!! They drain every single click, data, keyboard input, every mouse movements for a while now. The strategy is to train an ai to replace the worker. The copilot is you.

Ok so there are 3 microsoft products called copilot now. Surely this won't confuse anyone

danthecclamman@lemmy.world

How the hell else are PMs going to get positive reviews this quarter? Waiting for Excel, Word, Powerpoint and Windows to all be called Copilot

Rug_Pisser@piefed.zip

Copilot Sheets.
Copilot Docs.
Copilot Slides.

dan@upvote.au

English

↑ 28 ↓ 3 · 6 hours ago

Are you including Github Copilot in that count? Technically that's a Microsoft product. It's probably the only Copilot that's actually useful.

A controversial take. Every new feature added to Github has made it more unpleasant to use, and a lot of that is down to Copilot, for me. Only way to get rid of it is to wait for Github to go down again, which is the only thing it does reliably at the moment.

Every new feature added to Github has made it more unpleasant to use

Free private repositories, Github Actions, and Github Packages are all pretty useful though. All of those were added under Microsoft's ownership. Actions got a head start because it was built on top of Azure DevOps infra that Microsoft had already created.

I get the Pro version for free since I've worked on a few popular open-source projects. I'm using it in VS Code and it's helped me write code for systems I'm unfamiliar with. I've used it to summarize the architecture of open-source projects so I understand how to contribute new features. The autocompletion can be pretty good too. I also use it to review my code.

We use Claude Code with the Opus 4.5 model at work, and it's quite a bit better, but I don't want to pay that much for an AI model for personal projects since I use it so infrequently.
